

MSG POISONOUS INGREDIENT

Written by Administrator
Tuesday, 26 April 2016 12:43 -

THE MSG PORK-POISONOUS INGREDIENT

Question

Are foods with the MSG ingredient halaal? Some Ulama say that it is a halaal ingredient. However, I have been told that some time ago in Indonesia it was established that MSG contains pig substances. Please comment.

ANSWER

Innumerable processed products contain this poisonous ingredient. The poison and harms to the health caused by the ingredient monosodium glutamate (MSG) have been scientifically established by the western masters and leaders of modernist Muslim bootlickers. It causes even cancer.

The pork content of MSG was conclusively established in Indonesia some years ago. The report on the issue is reproduced here.

INDONESIA International outrage over Ajinomoto's use of pork enzyme in halal food escalates

As three Japanese and four Indonesian officials from PT Ajinomoto Indonesia were arrested

MSG POISONOUS INGREDIENT

Written by Administrator
Tuesday, 26 April 2016 12:43 -

by local police, the largest Islamic body in the country admitted that it knew months ago that pork enzymes were being used in the production of the widely used flavour enhancer, monosodium glutamate (MSG). The Indonesian Ulemas Council (MUI) uncovered the illegal use of bactosoytone when it began an audit of the company in September 2000.

Due to strict religious beliefs Muslims must only eat halal food, which is certified as free from pig product ingredients. Situated in the largest Muslim country in the world however, the head of MUI, the body that certifies halal food, K.H. Maruf Amin, said that "it did not want to scare the public until it got the facts right."

Delay to reveal pork ingredients politically motivated?

Others believe the delay on the part of MUI was politically motivated, as it positions itself between President Abdurrahman Wahid's struggling coalition government and the national assembly chairman Amein Rais, who is believed to be planning a coup before this coming August. Din Syamsuddin, MUI secretary general, maintains however that the three months taken to audit Ajinomoto was "nothing out of the ordinary."

Revelations that the Indonesian subsidiary of Japan's Ajinomoto Co continued to use pork enzymes during the audit period have led many to label the government weak and ineffective...

Recall initiated and factory sealed

Nevertheless, the health minister has given Ajinomoto three weeks to complete a recall of 3,000 tonnes of MSG products from Indonesian shelves, and the company's factory and warehouses in East Java have been sealed.

Saleh Saaf, national police spokesman, revealed, "seven executives have been declared suspects, but they can be released when we finish the questioning." Among those arrested for breaches in the consumer protection law were Ajinomoto Indonesia vice-president Yashushu Oda and president director Mitsuo Arakawa, who may face a five-year jail sentence.

Meanwhile Wijono Subagyo, lawyer for the company executives, commented that the planned investment of US$137m has been cancelled because "Ajinomoto thinks it is not profitable to continue after the withdrawal and the closure of the existing factories."

A spokesman for Ajinomoto, which controls a third of the 1.5m tonnes MSG market worldwide, added: "It is not clear when we will be able to resume selling the MSG products in Indonesia." It is also too early apparently to say how the incident will affect earnings.

TSE sees Ajinomoto stock value plummeting

In Tokyo, Ajinomoto's stock has plummeted and some argue that the Japanese investor community in Indonesia will be shaken by the arrests. An official at the Japanese Embassy in Indonesia commented however: "There are no indications yet that the confidence of Japanese firms has been affected. Many of them see the Ajinomoto case as just being a special case with no bearing on the investment climate."

Ajinomoto incident spreads to Malaysia

Hidenori Kawasaki, general manager of Kokusai Securities' equities trading division, did go as far as to reveal: "The market is wondering whether this is an issue only in Indonesia or if it would spread to other nations." And, with calls from an Islamic consumer group in Malaysia to test purportedly halal food despite repeated assurances that it is safe, it seems the panic has

MSG POISONOUS INGREDIENT

Written by Administrator
Tuesday, 26 April 2016 12:43 -

spread.

Nadzim Johan, executive secretary of the Muslim Consumers Association of Malaysia, explained: "We are in no position to assure the consumers that the products are safe. That is why we want the Domestic Trade and Consumer Affairs Ministry to carry out tests and make the findings public."

And in terms of informing the public, the reassuring words of Ajinomoto Malaysia last Friday are simply not enough to instil consumer confidence.
(End of Report)

The Ulama who claim that products with this haraam poisonous ingredient are halaal do not know what they blurt out recklessly. All products with the MSG ingredient are HARAAM.

18 Rajab 1437 – 26 April 2016