COMMERCIAL BISCUITS SANHA'S BUNKUM CARRION CONFIRMATION

Question

What is the status of biscuits produced commercially? SANHA says that 'industrial alcohol' is non-khamr hence even a million litres is guzzled are halaal? Are commercial biscuits halaal?

Answer

SANHA is a rotten carrion meat and chicken halaalizer. It is surprising that Muslims attach any credence to the rotten words of an entity which knows only how to issue haraam 'halaal' certificate for marketing carrion. And the objective is only the haraam boodle with which these juhala nourish their bodies.

All commercial biscuits are unfit for Muslim consumption. The ruling of the Shariah is between Mushtabah and Haraam. It is not only the haraam ethanol ingredient. Commercial biscuits are loaded with a stack of mushtabah and haraam ingredients. Among these are alcohol, gelatine, stabilizers, emulsifiers, colourants and a host of other porky ingredients camouflaged with E numbers.

Muslims should not repose even a vestige of trust on a jaahil, faasiq, faajir entity which claims that synthetic PORK is halaal. The very term 'pork' for a product renders it haraam. For money have these fussaaq sold their Imaan.

ABSTAIN FROM ALL COMMERCIAL BISCUITS. MAKE YOUR OWN HALAAL TAYYIB BISCUITS AT HOME. ABSTAIN FROM THE CARRION OF SANHA.
