SEXUAL MOLESTATION OF BOYS – A DEEPLY EMBEDDED DISEASE

A SISTER WRITES:

May Allah Ta'ala reward The Majlis for always guiding the Ummah.

(1) With regards to the be-hayaaee (shamelessness/obscenity) of the Ustaadhs, something which disturbs us came to mind. Our nephew was in a boys school/Madrassa around the overport area. He told my son that one day the Ustaadh told them that they are getting big now and he told them explicitly (including the mention of private organs of male and female) how a baby is conceived. When my son related this to me and asked me if this is true, I was stunned and calmly told him it's not correct for the Ustaadh to speak like this.

(2) Another incident also comes to mind. When I was teaching, a mother who home-schooled and home-grew her children said that her young son went in jamaat with some elders and other boys. She says her son told her that the discussions of the boys during jamaat were perverted and included topics like masturbation.

It's about time we take charge of our children, understand that they are an amaanat and we will be questioned about them. We are nearing Qiyaamat and there will be worse be-hayaaee incidents. It is our duty as parents to nurture our children in the best way and in this day and age it seems like it can only be done by the parents themselves. While it's extremely challenging and sacrificing to be teaching our children Maktab and secular work ourselves, we have to accept the importance of discharging this obligation when we cannot not find suitable Ustaadhs.

(End of the Sister's letter)

COMMENT

These are not isolated incidents. The community is in the epicentre of a vortex of sexual abuse and child abuse by molvis and teachers. Girls Madrasahs are included in the avalanche of immorality which has settled on Muslims.

It is absolutely HARAAM to allow your young boys to go on these shaitaani jaunts which the fussaag/fujjaar molvis term 'youth programmes'. Men whose brains have become perverted with their inordinate carnal lust are guilty of acts of sexual perversion.

Parents must wake up and realize the danger which these youth programmes pose for their children. Youth programmes are the inspiration of shaitaan. He has prepared this dangerous moral snare to entrap molvis, teachers and young boys into his net of vice of the worst kind.
